ANCIENT PASTIME OF ARCHERY IS REVIVED BY ENTHUSIASTS.

MISS MILDRED MOORE,

Who is actively engaged in promoting an archery club in Webster Groves.

of archery has broken out in St. Louis. Fashionable persons are taking up the game with vigor in many parts of the city, especially in the suburban districts, where the lawns are already dotted with big red. white and blue targets, and prize contests are a feature of lawn parties and other aft-

Lovers of archery in St. Louis say there is be a marked feature of amateur sports at the World's Fair. A unique feature of the archery clubs that society maidens and matrons are promoting here is the employment of a real Indian as instructor.

"War Eagle" is not an unfamiliar sight to frequenters of the Midway at the Union Station. He is a full-blooded Indian, born in a birch-bark tepes at Old Orchard Beach, Me., where his forefathers hunted and fished for generations untold before him. His father was a Chickasaw and his mother a Mickmack, a tribe of Indians that have long flourished along the coasts of the United States and as far north as Labrador.

Many suburban travelers and others who were fond of archery and wanted to establish the game in their country lawns got to know "War Eagle" after he came to St. Louis, and, finding out what an expert he was with the bow and arrow, invited him to their homes, and thus the revival of archery on scientific lines began.

WEBSTER GROVES CONTEST. Among the earlier pupils of "War Eagle" was Miss Josephine Moore, daughter of Doctor J. Harvey Moore of Webster Groves, and now the young people in that pretty suburb are taiking archery to the exclusion of all other summer pastimes.

when they are shot and not be touched by it.

"Then pass the tip of the arrow across the bow at the center. Then pass the bow at the carrow across the bow at the center. Then pass the bow at the carrow across the bow at the center. Then pass the bow at the carrow across the bow at the center. Then pass the bow at the carrow across the bow at the center. Then pass the bow at the carrow across the bow at the carrow

A sudden revival of the ancient pastime | been rushed with orders and have been promising everything, but doing nothing. Of course, archery is not an inexpensive

"The best English-made bows, and they are the best, cost from $10 up to $100 each, if you care to pay that. These are made of lance wood, backed with lemon, and have a pull of from 50 to 100 pounds. Good arrows iniald near the point with hardwood can be employed at the same time. Tar gets cost about $3 each, so you see it does cost a little. It is splendld sport, however, and I hope to see a large number of clubs and I hope to see a large number of clubs at work before the season is over."

War Engle loves to talk of archery. "There are only two things I would bet on," said he. "One Is my own broncho and the other my bow. I never wager on another man's game. But I will bet I can beat any many riding on my own broncho, and if any man thinks he can beat me with a bow and arrow he can break me. "Young ladles, to become expert with the bow, as I like to have them," said War Eagle, "need patience, and the teacher needs patience also. She ought to dress afreely as an Indian. She should have a short, easy-fitting skirt, a light, free walst, stout shoes and leggings. A light peak cap that will shade her eyes and not a hat that will interfere with the bow is the best head dress.

will interfere with the bow is the best head-dress.

"Most persons accept the English posi-ion in drawing the bow—that is, the bow is kept fairly well in front of the body rather than at the side. It is rather a prettly po-sition, and effective, also. Then the arrow is drawn from the quiver with the first and second fingers of the right hand, while the how is held with the left. Then the touch of the thumb on the butt of the arrow in-dicates that the feathers are in such a po-sition that they will slide over the bow when they are shot and not be touched by it.

"We could have had a dozen archery clubs already in operation in St. Louis," if they will learn these few first principles carefully, then practice will we had only been able to get bows and arrows. The big sporting-goods houses have catarrh. Asthma and loss of the special sense of smelling and hearing are conditions which have permanently established themselves as results from hay fever.

"Preventive treatment is of great benefit to many. Victims of the disease, which by its distinct periodicity, know pretty well to the day when the attacks will begin. Cleansing, deterrent sprays and doucnes and various local applications that will temporarily relieve the congested areas are the best means of at least relieving the oncoming trouble."

with secrecy. The machine was placed on board the Arkansas June 26. Since then it has been un-the machine, to which the various other parts are attached.

On top of the ark, which is the home of this huse bird, is built a track upon which a car is run to aid the machine in starting its flight. The principle seems to be the same as that employed by certain large birds which run a short distance before launching themselves into the air.

TOO LATE TO SAVE CHILD. Infant Fell From Roof at Mement

Mother Saw Its Danger. REPUBLIC SPECIAL kansas June 28. Since then it has been under guard constantly, der guard constantly, Eight men are at work upon the airship and at night there is a special guard who keeps all would-be visitors away.

At present Doctor Langley is in the North, but he will join the ark at a secluded place many miles down the river, and the test will be made under his personal direction.

Since 1996, the date of his last experiments, Doctor Langley has spent much time perfecting his present machine. His former experiments were made with a model only, but this machine is no model, but a veritable airship, capable—it is hoped—of carrying a man to guide its flight.

It has been built at a heavy cost, more than $55,000, of which $50,000 was appropriated by Congress.

The machine is between fifty and sixty feet long and is built of brass and steel. It is propelled by a gasoline engine. Much difficulty was experienced before an engine considered sufficiently light could be found. A cigur-shaped cylinder is the backbone of the machine, to which the various other parts are attached.

On top of these statished. the extension, and on these sae placed the child while she attended to her duties. In some way he managed to squeeze between the rails that guard the side of the steps, and just at the moment that his mother saw his danger and made an effort to save him, he fell.

The child landed on its head and shoulders on the stone steps which lead to the cellar and was unconscious when picked up by his mother.

and was unconscious when picked up its mother.

Taking him in her arms she rushed around the corner to her home without waiting for the ambulance from the First Precinct to arrive, and there a few minutes later the police found the mother holding the bruised and crushed form in her arms. At the hospital it was said there was little hope of the tiny sufferer's recovery.
